TUESDAY MORNING, JAN. 14, 1872.

WHY does Mayor Johnson refuse to take past-due coupons in payment of city taxes? This is a question frequently put to us nowadays, and which we find it impossible to answer on any other score than that the Mayor is wedded to his peculiar ways and notions, end," contrary as many of them are to right, reason and good sense. It seems to us a little that the contrary course is a blunder, perdstency in which by our chief mag-would willingly remove him from office. His conduct is intolerable and insufferable. According to his own exhibt the assets, if collected, would more than pay our Habilities by some one hundred and tifly thousand dollars. Why does be hesitate then to receive the limbilities for assets, especially when by doing so he will be liquidating a pressing indebtedness, the payment of which is the measure of our credit. Every honcet business man will admit that one of his first duties is to pay when he can, and upon as easy terms for himself as he can secure from his creditors; and if one of his debtors were to offer him, in payment of his dues, his own notes past due and bearing interest, would be not take it eagerly, if for no other reason than that it enabled him to take his paper from the street, where it had probably been sold and resold as a sort of doubtful secarity? We think so. It is a plain case. But, the Mayor will say, if I take coupons others will insist upon my taking scrip, and I will not have money enough to pay the current expenses, necessary in carrying on the government. To this ignominious death to which he was so tenced by the court last week. They have already drawn up their bill of excontions to be presented immediately. In this, as the telegraph yesterday informs us, they hold that the court erred in not sustaining a challenge against one of the jurors, in permitting the hearsar evidence of Francis Curtis, in permitting allusion to the former trial by the prosecution, in not admitting the offer to show that the prisoner was auxless to disclose his defense before the Coroner's inquest, in permitting proof of threats to be introduced at the end of The Dyersburg Gazette has some well-callty, in ruling out the offer to show that the prisoner was noder apprehensions of Fisk's violence, and erred in shours of Fisk's violence, and erred in calculating proof that Stokes was watched adoged by unknown parties, also that disqualified persons were on the jury Ou these points they will ask that disgraphing the sum-calculating the sum-calculating the sum-calculating the sum-calculating out the offer to show that the prisoner was noder apprehensions which the Board of Super-cached about three o'clock Sunday evening, having spent about three o'clock Sunday evening, having sp the trial, in ruling out the offer to show
